Disclosure of Potential Conflicts of Interest

A conflict of interest arises in scholarly publishing when a person's professional or financial interests are in conflict with their academic responsibilities as a scholar. Journal of Stress Analysis requests authors to disclose all relevant financial relationships or intellectual properties for any aspect of the work under consideration for publication that could potentially constitute a conflict of interest and influence the content of the submitted work.

Corresponding author's name:

Title of the manuscript under consideration:

1. Financial activities

Have the authors received, at any time during the preparation and execution of the submitted manuscript, payments from any third parties except the academic institutions affiliated with the authors of the manuscript? If you have indirectly received financial support from third parties through your academic institution (such as grants, governmental funds, private sponsors or scholarships), disclose the relevant information by including the names of those third parties. Otherwise, state that there are no financial activities pertaining to the submitted work that you are aware of.

2 Non-financial support

Have you received non-financial support from third parties for the submitted manuscript? Examples include laboratory equipment, administrative support, assistance in the preparation of the manuscript, covering travel costs, etc.

3. Intellectual Property

Are there any patents (pending, issued, licensed) or royalties relevant to the submitted work under consideration? If yes, please include the details of the patent or royalties.

4. Final disclosure statement

Please write a statement, fewer than 200 words, to declare in brief the potential conflicts of interest, as provided above. If there are other relationships not covered above, feel free to add them in your final statement. If there are no conflicts of interest, write: "the authors of the manuscript declare no conflicts of interest."

I, [Name of the Corresponding Author], on behalf of all authors of the manuscript titled [title of the manuscript goes here], declare that the statement declared above is inclusive, complete and final.
